

Naftali Zvi Frankel is an experienced and caring consumer advocate. He has had the opportunity to volunteer for research and analysis of scientific studies, available treatments, and specialists for many individuals faced with critical medical decisions. Naftali Zvi Frankel serves as a member of American Heart Association Citizen Scientist think tank, a member of the Commonwealth Fund Breakthrough Health Care Opportunities advisory board, and a Member of the PCORI-AVR Patient and Caregiver Collaborator team. He has been described by Dr. John Santa of Consumer Reports as having "...extraordinary organizational skills, search skills and review experience...a dogged analyst and reviewer, able to find, analyze and report on large amounts of data..." The Chancellor of Touro College has described Naftali Zvi Frankel's "...ability to fully examine the complexities of issues and implications of various policy decisions...", while also noting his "...deep-seated concern for the welfare of others...altruistic in his pursuits and priorities..." In 2014, Naftali Zvi Frankel published an article in Jama Internal Medicine: "Surgical Aortic Valve Replacement vs Transcatheter Aortic Valve Replacement: A Consumer's Perspective Regarding Data Education and Transparency of Hospitals," highlighting the need for increased hospital data transparency. Naftali Zvi Frankel graduated Touro College with a Bachelor of Arts, Summa Cum Laude. He has an extensive specialized education studying Talmudic law in the Talmudic Research Center, New Jersey; Brisk Yeshiva, Israel; and Institute for Advanced Talmudic Studies, New York. He published "Sefer Hodesh Le-shanah," a comprehensive analysis and compilation of opinions related to the Judaic laws and customs regulating employee entitlement to severance in the United States, Canada, Europe and Israel. Naftali Zvi Frankel is presently pursuing a Master of Science, Regulatory Science, from Johns Hopkins University.